

Here are a series of questions to explore in this week's tutorial:

1. Name two types of arguments. Give an example of each type.
2. What four questions can you ask to help identify an argument?
3. What is the first step in Cottrell's (2017) model of Critical Thinking as a Process?
4. How can Critical Thinking be applied in daily life? Why is this encouraged?
5. Name the five elements of the basic version of Gibbs' (1988) Reflective Cycle and suggest a question that could be asked at each stage?
6. Give examples of how you have been putting Gibbs' (1998) Reflective Cycle into practice.
E.g. when making decisions/problem solving/identifying arguments/questioning ideas
